

Rural and regional opportunities

- There are many lifestyle benefits to living in rural and regional Victoria, including a strong sense of community, better work-life balance, and access to nature.
- More people are living and working in rural and regional Victoria. Rural health practice is varied and complex, and there is a need to develop the rural health workforce.
- Rural and regional health practice offers exciting work, with opportunities to take on broader roles, gaining diverse clinical experience and skills.
- Nurses and midwives in these settings can gain access to leadership opportunities and advanced practice roles.
- Graduates are encouraged to take the time to look at the tourism videos within PMCV's GNMP Match Health Service Directory to learn more about the opportunities in rural and regional health services.
